1. A Soviet advance detail of one hundred to two hundred troops arrived in the "Burger Holz" (woods northeast of BURG (W 53/Y 81)) in June 1949.
2. Columns totaling more than 150 motor vehicles, mostly passenger cars, arrived in these woods between 15 and 20 July 1949. The passenger cars were almost exclusively large modern sedans. No heavy weapons were observed with the motor columns. They approached the woods from the BERLIN Highway. The arriving troops totaled between six hundred and one thousand.
3. A courier airfield which had been established about a half-mile northeast of BURG was repeatedly used by single-engine biplanes between 18 and 27 July 1949. The field was about 1,600 feet square. The landing T and the parking area for biplanes were in the southeastern corner of the field. Six aircraft were observed, with numerical designations between 2 and 11.
4. An overhead, two-wire telephone line had been strung from the forester's house to the BERLIN Highway and connected with the telephone lines along the highway.
